YOU HIT THEM, WE CHASE THEM.

FLAGS.

Snowden, Britain's little fighting chancellor of the exchequer, objects to the talk about "panic" in England. "England has not tapped her overseas wealth," says he.
That is slightly exaggerated for England is industrially tapping the world's greatest supply of diamonds in South Africa.

And England's gold mines are sending pure beautiful gold to London at the rate of $15,000,000 a month and more.

The trouble is, and hence the British tears, that as fast as England produces the gold, France gets it. It reminds you of the modern gold practice fields that rents you a paul of balls for 25 cents with the slogan "you hit 'em, we chase
'em."

The English chase them, and the French get them.

A new rift appears in the Democratic lute for 1932. The very important support of Tammany Hall, in the convention, was supposed to be "all set" for Governor Roosevelt.

But the governor, ignoring Tammany's protests, calls a special legislature to increase the power of Judge Seabury, investigating conditions in New York.

Some New York newspapers say Tammany considers this treason and will knife Roosevelt, after giving him a perfunctory vote.

That's one view. Another is that Roosevelt, having read political history, may prefer not to run under the label "Tammany's Pet."

New York Democrats, indignant that anybody should suggest investigating a city where magistrates dine with thugs and call them their first names, propose to get revenge by investigating Republicans "upstate." A little investigating all around might give interesting results, possibly even in New Jersey.

A young senator of that state, supposed to have been shot by a New York young lady, whom he had put on the New Jersey state payroll, is said also to have provided the interesting young person with free railroad passes as "an employee of the New Jersey legislature."

The distressful shooting occurred, according to the young lady, who cannot explain how it happened,
"early in the morning after we had drunk a great deal of gin." Police say the amount was four or five bottles, which shows that from New Jersey state senators, at least, prohibition is not absolutely prohibitive.

Frank L. Smith, elected to the United States senate in Illinois, was thrown out by the senate because of the allegation that Mr. Insull, big power, had helped to finance
Mr. Smith's campaign.

Now Mr. Smith says that Mr.
Julius Rosenwald, of Illinois, offered him $250,000, making withdraw from the race, making sure the election of his opponent, the senatorial candidate favored by Mr. Rosenwald.

When this was written late yesterday Mr. Rosenwald had not replied to Mr. Smith.

Some newspapers say that

STOP WELLS OR GO TO JAIL IS OIL FIELD EDICT

National Guard Cavalry- men Ride Through East Texas Fields

(By Associated Press)
KILGORE, TEX., Aug. 18.—Texas national guard cavalrymen rode through the great East Texas oil field today, carrying to operators the military ultimatum "shut down by noon or go to jail."

The order was issued by General Jacob F. Wolters, commander of the 56th brigade, who took military control of four east Texas counties at 6 a. m. yesterday, under a martial law proclamation of Governor Ross S. Sterling. The governor acted to stop production, until the state's new conservation laws can be put into action, of a field which oilmen say has demoralized the industry through its overproduction.

100 Per Cent Effective
Within 36 hours after occupation, troop officers anticipated the shutdown order would be practically 100 per cent effective.

Governor Sterling's action followed closely that of Governor William H. Murray of Oklahoma, two weeks ago in shutting down Oklahoma's wells by martial law. The Kansas public service commission also has acted to bolster the petroleum industry by threatening to shut down wells.

Leaders of the industry praised Governor Sterling's action and said it, together with Governor Murray's shutdown, should bring about an increase in the price of crude oil. The general top price now is 52 cents a barrel.

74 Firms Close Down

Seventy-four companies, including all the major concerns operating in the field, had closed down completely last night. Isolated wells were being closed by the guardsmen today.

A fear that thousands of oil workers would be thrown out of employment through the close down were largely discounted by operators.
Drilling was continuing in new wells with ban on bringing in new wells if they were immediately shut down. Most companies planned to care for employees during the shutdown period.

More applications were received for positions this summer than for several years he stated.

LEGION SPLIT ON REPEAL PLAN

Fight on Floor Looming; Toledo Chosen for Next Convention

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 18.—A closely contested fight over resolution favoring repeal of the Eighteenth amendment loomed today in the final business session of the annual convention of the Ohio Legion.

Irritated over yesterday's indecisive action, in which the resolution committee deadlocked over the question, proponents of the repealer were prepared to bring up the proposal from the floor. William E. Handley of Cincinnati, former Cincinnati post commander, was leading the repeal forces.

One other principal item of business remained, that of selecting a successor to Commander John A.
Elden of Cleveland. Paul Herbert of Columbus had considerable support for the post.

Toledo Gets Meet

In its closing sessions yesterday, the convention selected Toledo as its 1932 convention city and unanimously endorsed Elden, retiring state commander, as Ohio's choice for a candidate to the national commander's post at the Detroit national convention in September.

In a heated session, the convention expressed its displeasure over failure of the state board of control to "alleviate the dangerous and disgraceful conditions" existing at the Ohio soldiers and sailors orphans home at Xenia.

Communicating its feelings to the board, in session at Columbus, the convention delivered an ultimatum that the board act or face the displeasure of 22,000 members of the Ohio department and 24,000 members of the women's auxiliary.

Previously saying they had too many other matters for consideration, board members later released $160,000 for a new dining hall at the home.

10,000 Delegates March Last night 10,000 delegates to the convention staged their annual parade before 250,000 spectators.

RIVALS IN VOTE AT LEETONIA TO TOSS FOR PLACE

But They Will Have To Prove G. O. P. Qualifications First

The Republican nominee for marshal of the village of Leetonia will be determined at a special meeting of the Columbiana county board of elections at East Liverpool at 7:30 p. m. Thursday, J. S.
Hilbert, chief of the board, announced today.

Names Written In

The elections officials will gather to settle a tie between C. J.
Marshall and Fred Metts, for the marshalship nomination in the August primary election in Leetonia last Tuesday. Names of both men were written in on two ballots, the vote qualifying them for the nomination.

Acting on information received
Monday night, Clerk John W.
Moore wrote the two men today to determine their qualifications for the nomination. Hilbert said that he had been informed that Metts and Marshall are both Democrats and that neither is qualified for the Republican nomination.

If such is the case, Hilbert said, John J. Mullen, who won the Democratic nomination as marshal, will be unopposed in the November election unless an opponent is drafted into the race by petition.

Will Flip Coin

Should Metts and Marshall be qualified Republicans, a board member will flip a coin to determine which of the two will oppose Mullen at the November balloting.
Charles A. Cavanaugh of Salem, member of the election board, will attend the meeting.

'This Corner, Jack Dempsey--' Divorce Court Battle Looms

Former Champ Files Suit; Estelle Counters With Charge of Cruelty; Wanted Guarantee; Says Her Devotion Made Her Ask Small Settlement

(By Associated Press)
LOS ANGELES, Aug. 18.—Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, and his actress wife, Estelle Taylor, have resorted to the divorce courts to settle their differences after weeks of sparring by their legal representatives over a property settlement.

Dempsey filed suit yesterday in Reno, Nev., charging mental cruelty. Soon after Miss Taylor heard of his action, she instructed her attorneys to file
for a divorce and charge cruelty.

With Nevada divorce laws not requiring details of charges on which divorces are sought, particulars of Dempsey's petition were not available. In Miss Taylor's complaint, drawn up last night and signed by her, she made general charges of cruelty and referred to the expensive automobile which she recently said was taken from her chauffeur by Joe Dempsey, brother of Jack, who gave her the car as a present.

Says Jack Was Cruel

The complaint will charge that Dempsey "for a long time prior to the date of separation has been guilty of extreme cruelty in his conduct toward the plaintiff in that he has wrongfully inflicted upon plaintiff grievous mental pain and suffering without justification or excuse."

HOOVER READY TO MEET FOES' NEW OFFENSIVE

Will Reply to Thrusts By Governor Roosevelt,
Senator Harrison

EXECUTIVE BUSY
ON RELIEF PLANS

New York's Governor In Limelight with Tammany Attack

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Washington's usual August political quiet is reverberating this year with inter-party and intra-party turmoil that has caught the attention of national leaders.

Governor Roosevelt of New York is commanding the limelight with a dual attack. His challenge to the Tammany machine within his own party in powerful New York and to President Hoover on the St. Lawrence waterway and power issue has punctured the political stillness of the capital.

Coincidentally, Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, who has been mentioned as a Democratic running-mate to Roosevelt in the preconvention speculation, comes forth with specific terms for a tariff debate with a Republican opponent—Senator Dickinson of Iowa.

Hoover To Reply

Alive to the sudden Democratic offensive, President Hoover has eaten back to the White House yesterday to reply to their thrusts.

As for Governor Roosevelt's unpublished letter to him on the St.
Lawrence waterway and power question, Mr. Hoover turned the reply over to Acting Secretary of State Castle. Mr. Castle replied that "no secret negotiations" with Canada relating to the project were in progress but Governor Roosevelt's letter was not made public.

Meanwhile, the President is going ahead in his own way on his formation of an unemployed program which recent Republican visitors to the White House have assured the country Mr. Hoover is preparing.

Joett Shouse, executive chairman of the Democratic national committee, has called for details of this program reported in preparation. While his demand was quickly noted at the White House, it appeared today that the President was going to ignore it and make his proposal in his own time.

Weigh Roosevelt Move

Democratic politicians were weighing closely the move of Governor Roosevelt in calling into special session his legislature in response to the Republicans of the special committee investigating conditions in New York City. The interpretation of New York newspapers that the move was a challenge to the Tammany organization in control of New York City's Democratic administration provoked the keen interest of the party outside of New York.

Alfred E. Smith, Democratic standard bearer of 1928, is a member of Tammany. He has so far refrained from announcing his position in the 1932 Democratic presidential contest.

Despite the eagerness of Senator
Harrison, who is the ranking Democrat on the finance committee, to that Julius Rosenwald (right), millionaire Chicago business man and

HARLAN FIELDS MINE STRIKERS YIELD WEAPONS

Deputies Seize Pistols,
Rifles, 2,000 Rounds
Of Ammunition

HARLAN, KY., Aug. 18.—In a series of raids on the homes of striking miners in the Harlan county coal fields today deputy sheriffs brought in six men charged with possessing arms and reported they had seized more than 2,000 rounds of ammunition, and confiscated a dozen rifles and several pistols.

The men arrested were Finley
Powers, Harlan Mealer, J. L. Van Hooser, William Gibbs, and two Negroes.

The deputies said 2,000 rounds of ammunition, eight rifles, two pistols and two shotguns were seized at the home of Gibbs. A quantity of radical literature also was found, officers reported.

Gibbs recently was released on bond after a similar raid.

Powers and Mealer were charged with having shotguns and rifles.
Similar charges were placed against Van Hooser.

The raids were understood to have been for the purpose of preventing a possible disorder during the coming trials of more than 100 men growing out of coal field killings and outbreaks.

Vincent Blotti, a miner, was arrested yesterday and charged with distributing radical literature.

CHICAGO DIVERS TO SEEK BODIES

Mysteriously Missing Victims Are Believed Buried In Quarry
Located Near Suburb

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—Deep sea divers may be employed to look for Chicago gangster victims.

This was revealed today when Patrick Roche, chief investigator for the state's attorney's office said he had received information he considered reliable that a water-filled rock quarry, 100 feet deep, was the burial place for several mysteriously missing Chicago gangsters. The quarry is situated in a deserted section near Summit, Ill., a suburb.

Leo Mongoven, reputed lieutenant of George "Bugs" Moran, seven of whose followers were slain in the 1929 St. Valentine's day massacre, and Tommy Abbott, who is reported to have been kidnapped by rival illiquo runners, are two suspected gangsters who have disappeared in recent months, Roche said.

"We are sending a diver to the quarry to make an estimate of the cost of a complete search," Roche said.

Grand Jury Session Will Open Sept. 8

LISBON, Aug. 18.—The next grand jury session in Columbiana county common pleas court, Judge
W. F. Lones presiding, will open Tuesday, September 8, Judge Lones announced today.

A three or four day session is scheduled for the jury which will investigate an accumulation of cases from lower courts following the last jury session. No major criminal cases have been filed as yet.

AIRMEN MUST LAND

Aviation, in making some of the laws governing international relations as obsolete as mileposts, demands that the nations reach some mutual understanding for the treatment to be accorded aviators of other lands who pass over their territory.

The treatment accorded Hugh Herndon and Clyde Pangborn in Japan is not so much a reflection on Japanese super-patriotism as an indication that national feelings have not kept pace with progress. This anachronism is not confined to aviators. At our own Philadelphia Navy yard visitors of all kinds are freely admitted and may make any observations that interest them, yet the appearance of small cameras in the hands of a party of schoolboys a couple of years ago brought armed guards running and established a virtual state of siege until all the offending boxes had been taken from the boys and placed under guard.

Herndon and Pangborn, charged with taking pictures over fortified areas, have been fined $1,025 each and subjected to other serious inconveniences, a sentence much lighter than might have been imposed. Possibly a pair of Japanese aviators flying with a camera over U. S. fortifications in the Philippines or Hawaii might have been subjected to the same inhospitable treatment, especially if "patriotic" societies took it upon themselves to make an issue of the matter.

International boundaries have ceased to exist, as far as airplanes are concerned. With Post and Gatty circling the world, Boardman and Poland pointing the nose of the plane over the Atlantic and setting it down in Istanbul for the greatest air trip achieved by man, the Lindberghs proceeding on their westward circling of the world with no more interference to their schedule than a motor tourist might suffer from bad roads, with Dr. Ekeker and his Graf Zeppelin making a mere holiday jaunt—with these conquests of the air becoming merely matters of flying routine, no nation can build a wall high enough to stop the birdmen who have made countries on the other side of the globe their neighbors.

After all, forts are nearly as obsolete as some of these laws. An airplane which can fly over one and photograph it can wipe it off the map just as easily, in case the occasion should arise, by a well placed charge of high explosives.

Airmen flying 5,000 miles at a hop cannot stop at every international boundary for passport visas. Heretofore these details have been taken care of by a sort of unofficial understanding but the Japanese incident shows that something more definite is needed.

This year has found the birdmen stretching their wings for longer flights. Transatlantic air travel, on the basis of this year's attempts, has odds in favor of the aviator. It is probable that before another year has passed some airman will start from our west coast and put his plane down on this same Japanese island.

Visiting aviators are going to fly over fortified regions. Unless they are virtually different from other tourists, some of them will have cameras. Conditions of today demand that there be some international accord governing the treatment to be extended to these foreign guests who wing their way from far places.

"MINNESOTA" PLAN

One reason for Ohio's substantiality is that its agriculture, for many years, has been operating on a policy similar to the "Minnesota" plan, now attracting wide attention in severely depressed agricultural states.

In summary, the "Minnesota" plan promotes diversified planting and the raising of crops for home consumption, along with poultry, dairy products and the like. It already has proved the economic salvation of many sections devoted to one-crop planting. The farmer who became poorer year by year through raising only wheat or some other single crop and neglected even to raise the vegetables for his own table and provide milk for his own kitchen, has prospered by diversifying his planting.

Throughout Ohio and notably in Columbiana county, wide range of planting is universal. There is no such thing here as a crop failure, unless drouth wipes out all vegetation, for if disease or insects take one crop or if the market fail, there is something else to bring in an income and generally there is some source of revenue throughout the year.

This plan of making the farm self-supporting has been broadened during the last year by a return to the pioneer system by which each farmer provided year-round storage of his food. Inflated demand for his goods had turned the farmer in boom times away from his only work. He sold his fresh vegetables in the summer and bought them back in cans in the winter. Sold his excess cattle and his hogs to the packer and bought his meat from the butcher.

Observers indicate general return to the old times. Farm women are filling their cellars with rows of home-canned goods, more rural residents than ever before are turning their pigs into salt pork, smoked hams and sausage for use this winter. Potatoes, cabbage and turnips are to be buried in straw lined heaps, kettles will be busy making apple butter and the choppers will be turning late cabbage into sauer kraut.

It appears that Columbiana county and the rest of Ohio have a long jump on the "Minnesota plan" for reports show that not only are supplies being raised but much needed foodstuff is being stored against the day of use.

What Others Say

BUT DOES ONE TORTURE A PARTNER?

The Wickersham commission, a few weeks since, reported that the police of American cities were hand in glove with thugs, hoodlums, slickers, racketeers and other criminals.

The Wickersham commission this week reports that the police of American cities are inhuman in their treatment of these same criminals; that their zealous application of the so called third degree is grossly brutal, if not downright fiendish.

The two reports do not jibe. Manifestly, a policeman in covert partnership with criminals does not take them into the "goldfish room" and belabor them with a rubber hose. Not necessarily because he is too tender-hearted, but because the belabored ones would be likely to expose the covert partnership in order to get square.

The Wickersham commission is made up of high-minded citizens, actuated by high motives and sincerely committed to a high purpose. But apparently their first close-ups of the underworld, and their first real contacts with policemen, have come since the commission was created. However much they themselves may be convinced of the soundness of their reports, they can not make us believe that policemen generally are corrupt, nor that policemen generally are needlessly harsh in their dealings with criminals.—Minneapolis Journal.

William E. "Pussyfoot" Johnson says Christmas can not be made by burning them at the stake. Other ardent "drys" would do well to ponder that obvious truth both literally and metaphorically.—Detroit Free Press.

LONDON, Aug. 18.—Every writer has in his lexicon the phrase, "a flood of Billingsgate," to unloose in describing picturesque moments when the air turns blue. This morning I strolled through Billingsgate market in the hope of getting an earful of choice invectives.

It was a disappointment. A couple of New York taxi-cab drivers in a verbal cinch offer far more variety and sulphuric cadence. Billingsgate is trenchant with fishmonging cries of the porters, who wear odd leather helmets suggesting dwarfed pagodas. But there was no cursing.

The helmets are to aid them in carrying heavy fish crates on their heads. They begin with modest loads, gradually increasing them and when necks "get set," as the saying goes, they can balance a weight of 250 pounds. Once it may have been necessary to wade ears against rowdy epithets. But not today.

Disharmonies of the district are not so oracular as olfactory. More than a thousand tons of fish pour into Billingsgate daily and at first the odor is suffocating but soon the sense of smell becomes atrophied and there is no discomfort. In fact it becomes a ripe tang, like the scent of pine.

A visitor to Billingsgate wanders through countless rows of dead fish and as a brighter mind so accurately observes: Nothing can look so dead as a fish. All about were prostrate lines of cod, the haddock, plaice, herrings, with red eyes, green whiskered and flabby white belled monstrosities from all over.

Every morning at five a sort of school bell rings and the market pops open. The army of hotel and restaurant buyers, fish merchants and housewives swarm in—prodding, examining and comparing. Hundreds of cats prowl the district and are driven away by special guards.

The shabby Billingsgate wharf is one of the oldest spots of the town. It is where London began and where the first merchants gathered. The name of Billingsgate came from Belin, once King of Britons. I came away with a conviction Billingsgate as a simile for loose tongues was a libel. I have heard rowdier talk at the Ritz.

Londoners speak of their town or write of it in capitals as The City. In expressing civic zeal they are pronounced Babbitts. In England one rarely hears of such enterprising and flourishing cities as Liverpool, Manchester, etc. The national spirit was long ago expressed by Dr.

Johnson with: "When a man is tired of London, he is tired of life; for there is in London all life can afford."

So, returning to The City from Billingsgate before 9 a. m., I was privileged to peek into that famous room in Downing Street, known to Fleet Streeters as The Invisible Voice of the Empire. Theoretically it is only here, the throne speaks. Officially it is occupied by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council and is the last appeal of all British subjects. It is chillingly formal, maroon coloured and extraordinarily solemn. Four fire places in veined marble slightly relieve the stiffness—but not much. It would not lend itself to rope skipping.

Left handed traffic here makes Americans dart like lizards out of hot stone piles to skip gutters for a few days but once you get the dash of it things are not so bad. After backing and filling this morning I reached a safety isle by an eye-lash and chirped to a chin-strapped bobby: "I made it!" He looked blank so I repeated with a foolish grin: "I made it!" Again it did not register so in confusion I switched to: "A bit foggy today." He still seemed to think me barmy and I began to feel the creep of a mounting blush. Maybe some day I'll learn to keep my trap shut.

There is ever something along London streets that harks back to periwigs and snuff boxes. Today on Canon street a gilt lion and unicorn heralded: "Starch, Mustard and Blue Makers for the King." Inside old-time money carriers zoom along wires.

And on the same street was a darkly stained "Ye Olde Oyde Shoppe." Piercing the clumsy swarm of traffic I swung through a set of swinging doors for the first time in 101 these many years. An old-burn haired bar maid named Nina served me a refreshing tankard and we talked of Attleboro, Mass., where her brother lives.

A dinner at a private home near Hyde Park tonight was utterly spoiled by the presence of one of those superior owl-eyed butlers floating solemnly around. Add Britain's direst needs: Scampering Butlers.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, Aug. 19
An active and possibly high-pressure state of affairs is suggested by the prevailing planetary configurations, but the financial return for those stimulated applications and initiative may not prove satisfactory. The funds should be protected and the affairs safeguarded against some subtly unworkable situation. There may be assistance or good council from elderly persons or institutions, with a sign of preferment or reward of merit from these. Letters may bring results.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a very lively and interesting year, with much stirring and the resources under high pressure, but the financial returns may not seem commensurate with the effort. Safeguard the money and seek advice and assistance from elderly persons and institutions, letters being well expected.

A child born on this day should be versatile, energetic, industrious and stable but may have to accept meager monetary returns for its endeavors. It may benefit from elders.

Botulism. Traced to Bad Food.
Botulism is a serious disease the result of food poisoning. It is caused by the presence of a dangerous germ in the food.

Interest in botulism in the United States is stimulated by periodic outbreaks of this disease. In the cases recently reported, the infection has been traced to the consumption of home canned food.

At one time it was believed this disease could be caused only by eating infected meat. It has been proved that infected vegetables, particularly ripe olives, canned string beans, asparagus, corn, apricots, olives and cheese may cause botulism.

Botulism is traced to food that has received inadequate treatment in the process of smoking, canning or pickling. It is never caused by fresh food, or by food that is served after boiling.

In home canning the food is often a few days old when "put up". This gives time for the germs to multiply. Further, the temperature maintained in the home process is usually insufficient to destroy the germs of botulism. When these germs are not destroyed, the disease is sure to appear.

In preserving foodstuffs only fresh and clean food should be used. Heating is absolutely essential and should be kept at a temperature of 120 degrees for at least 10 minutes.

Canning is safe only when the contents of the can are actually sterilized. The cans should be airtight and boiled at a sufficiently high temperature to destroy all germs. This is often difficult to do at home. To be assured of safety, buy only commercially canned foods which are prepared under the most rigid precautions. Cooking is not a sufficient precaution against food poisoning.

Remember that if allowed to stand, any food is well suited for a bacterial growth. Place all cooked food in the icebox to avoid any contamination and germ growth.

In this matter, too, it is vital to know the refrigerator actually refrigerates. A temperature below 40 degrees is essential to safety.

There's Nothing So Cheap as—

There is no dollar I expend
That brings back more to me
Than does the dollar that I spend For Electricity!

I never think my bills are high
Though some folks think they're steep,
There's not a thing that I can buy
That comes to me as cheap!

There is no service on this earth,
From food to coal to ice—
That gives me greater money's worth,
However low its price,
And there's no service, barring none,
That Mankind can procure,
To work for us from sun to sun
Of which we are so sure.

When I go home at eventide,
A magic wand I wave—
And I am served on every side
By this unfailing slave.
There is no gentler of my dreams,
That better heads my wand—
It NEVER fails, or so it seems,
At all times to respond!

And so I say I'm glad to pay
My light bills, all the while
They pay for that which night and day
Contributes to my smile.
Some bills are like a bitter pill—
My bank account they wreck,
But when I pay my 'lectric bill
I smile to sign the check!

OHIO EDISON

Flower of Thorns

By Marie Conway Oemler

SYNOPSIS

Sally Rutherford, the last of a proud old southern family, following the ruin and suicide of her grandfather, determines to keep the heavily mortgaged Oakleigh plantation for her grandmother. A porter's lodge, facing the Dixie highway, gives her the idea of starting a hot dog stand. She arranges with a milkman, who says he is Mr. Forman, foreman of the Winehead dairies, to deliver milk. He is really Samuel Forman Winstead, only son of Henry Winstead, town banker, and holder of the Oakleigh mortgage. The Rutherford ladies "didn't know" the Winsteads, of carpetbagging stock, whose estate adjoined Oakleigh. Sally's milkman helps her to make the shack a success before she discovers his identity. By that time she is receiving the court of Lowndes Jennings.

THE MORTGAGE CHANGES HANDS

"I, Sally Rutherford, belong to you, Lowndes Jennings forever and ever, world without end, until you yourself make me go," said she. "I wish to God I could marry you right now!" said he truthfully. For she was loving and lovely and he was a spoiled young man. "And live at Oakleigh. I wish I could give you Oakleigh along with me. Lowndes," said she sorrowfully. "But so long as I have you, I can't but feel rich. But I wish, Lowndes, that Oakleigh came to me. It would make grandpa so happy to know that such a master ruled over the dear old place!" "So long as we have each other," said he nobly. Even at that moment he wondered how he was going to manage, what was to come next. He, too, wished with all his heart that Oakleigh came along with her, that the poor old colonel hadn't been such an unmitigated old fool. "Now we must run back," said she. "Moses doesn't like to be left too long by himself. And you've an important dinner engagement."

"I wish you could go, too, darling. What a wonderful evening we'd have."

"I'll be thinking of you every minute, Lowndes. It has been a wonderful evening," said she quickly.

"When you put it like that, it's been the most wonderful evening of my life," said he, turning the car toward the shop. He slowed down at every dark space under the trees to kiss her. He wished to kiss her as often as he could while he had the chance. He told himself, recklessly, that he loved her, that no matter what fate had in store, she loved him, now he had held her in his arms. He had kissed her.

When Mr. Jennings escorted Miss Rutherford back to the shop, a tall figure rose springing out of a chair and greeted them. A quick glance at Lowndes and a keener and more searching glance at the girl's face revealed something of the secret she had meant to keep from all. She was usually pale, but tonight she scintillated. Her eyes were starry wells of young happiness, her soft lips curved into a girl's joyous smile. He saw, to the look she gave Lowndes Jennings, if he felt a stab of pain he concealed it.

"Evening, Moses has been mistaking me," he told Sally, and he nodded to Lowndes casually, his keen blue eyes on the other's handsome face. "O, good evening, Mr. Winstead," said Sally, politely. "Aren't you due at the Preston dinner, Winstead? If so, you'd better fly, hadn't you? I'm flying now," said Lowndes pleasantly. "Oh? O, yes," said Sam Winstead.

"How did they get you? Grappling hooks? I'm told you're harder to come by than Prester John," said Lowndes. "I heard I preferred to stay home and a dairy lunch? That's Maud Lundy's story," said Sam calmly. "However, if you want to know how the Prestons got me, they sent me a regular invitation and I returned a regular acceptance, like Tom and the missus. He nodded. "See you later."

"Not Lowndes Jennings, little Sally! He said to himself grimly as he climbed into his car. "Maybe somebody else, little girl, if it has to be!"

Within the week of his meeting Lowndes Jennings at Sally's, Sam and his father sat in the living room after dinner, Henry's one personal extravagance was fine cigars, which he bought wholesale and for which he paid a prohibitive price. The odor of fine tobacco hung in the air, mingled with the smell of burning cedar wood from the open fireplace. Sam was not smoking, but sat forward staring at the fire, one brown hand hanging idly.

"Tired?" asked Henry. "Uh-huh."

"Foolish to work too hard, son. Not good business."

"Haven't been working too hard, dad."

"No? Worried about something?" This diffidently, Sam turned his head.

"How'd you notice? he asked curiously.

"O, I just noticed, that's all," said Henry apologetically. "I asked—because I wondered if I could—ah—help in any way." So the boy was worried. The father's heart tightened.

"Dad," blurted the boy, "I—we—you don't want Oakleigh."

the knuckles showed white. "Dad," blurted the boy, "I—we—you don't want Oakleigh." As Henry still said nothing, being astonished, Sam asked steadily: "Will you let me take Oakleigh off your hands, dad? Let me take up those mortgages?"

"I don't think I understand," said Henry. "You just said you didn't want it."

"No. But I want you to turn the mortgages over to me, nevertheless. Let me pay you the full amount."

"Forty thousand dollars is a large sum," Henry reminded him mildly. "Nevertheless, dad, I am asking you to let me take over the mortgages, and pay in full, out of my own money. I have to have it."

He smiled wryly. "But what for?" asked Henry. "For a wedding present. If you must know," said Sam, after another long pause. He spoke almost defiantly, and his face flushed.

"O! You—you are—in love, son?" Very diffidently. "Yes, dad, I'm in love," he answered truthfully. "Do I get the mortgages?"

"Are you engaged to the young lady?" "No, dad, I'm not. Not yet. But I have an idea that I shall marry her after a while. So I want Oakleigh for a wedding present. Do I get the mortgages, dad?"

"For a space Henry was silent. He smoked thoughtfully. "You are my only son," he said presently. "Your mother—" he stopped.

"You were frightfully in love with my mother, weren't you, dad?" "I am," said Henry, using the present tense. "She—you look very much like her, Sam. She—told me she wouldn't be altogether gone, so long as you remained. Sometimes I get you both—you and your mother—confused in my mind."

"I gathered that—that between the lines of her letter," said Sam. "She knew things that other people never seem to catch a glimpse of," said Henry simply. "You're not altogether like her in that respect—nobody could be—but you have flashes, I've noticed."

"That is why I believe you are going to turn Oakleigh over to me."

"Very well, son. You have asked for it, and you shall have it," said Henry slowly. "And you shall pay for it. You would prefer that?"

"Yes, I want to pay for it myself," said Sam eagerly. "I think I shall have to pay more than that, before the—affair is settled."

"I'm right in thinking that—that the girl—is Col. Rutherford's granddaughter, am I not?" "Yes, sir, the girl—is Col. Rutherford's granddaughter."

"Is she in love with you Sam?" Henry asked eagerly. "No. She doesn't like the Winsteads. But I am in love with her. As you were with my mother. We take it hard, we Winstead men, don't we?"

"It lasts all our life through," said Henry soberly. "Naturally we take it hard! And you think the young lady doesn't like the Winsteads? But why? She doesn't know us."

"So she told me: 'We don't know us.'"

"So she told me: 'We don't know us.'"

Germany's Dam Against Reds Gives; Caps Open To Britain

British Government Calls Statesmen to Strengthen Defenses

He was stationed at Berlin for several years and during that time visited Moscow, Vienna, Bucharest and many other cities throughout central Europe. LONDON, Aug. 18.—The German dam against Bolshevism is broken. Broad streams of red ideology pouring through huge gaps and winding through the manifold phases of German life are beginning to lap the shores of England.

This is the appalling but world-historic truth dawning upon Europe and the world.

This is the reason that the British government has proclaimed a national emergency and called statesmen of all parties to help ramify the bulwarks and erect a new line of defense against the Red tide.

The collapse is the result of the mushroom growth of the world's social overhead, represented by huge political debts, armaments and socialist extravagance. In America, racketeering is costing $12,000,000,000 a year—all of which, reduced to purchasing power, which glutted the markets and produced a problem of overproduction which is really under-consumption. The greatest loss of all is uncertainty in the future and loss of confidence, stilling business initiative.

Germany First Victim
The revolutionary tide, spreading from Moscow and battering the gates of Asia and Australia, threatens to make Germany its first European victim.

The victors of Versailles left the east Prussian fortresses as a defense against Bolshevism, but repatriation and their refusal to make peace with German nationalism and the proletariat classes put socialism in the saddle and undermined Germany's old social and economic structure. The world is still courting German socialism because it is a convenient foreign policy, forcing Chancellor Heinrich Brüning to lean in the same direction.

The crisis precipitated by France's haggling over the Hoover moratorium has driven Germany further red. Before me is a report from a British bank to its clients: "Recent developments in Germany," the report reads, "must afford concern to the entire capitalist system. It is little realized yet to what extent Germany has adopted the practices of Soviet Russia. Banking has become a state monopoly. The mark is pegged currency, little different from the system of control of the ruble."

The German crisis is due partly to reparations and partly to socialist extravagance. Many of Britain's troubles are due to importation of German ideas.

Dole Is Menace

The unemployment dole, costing more than $600,000,000 annually, is Britain's greatest menace, creating a deficit in the budget, undermining morale and creating a rapidly-growing socialist appetite, as manifested in the far-reaching socialist demands scheduled for presentation to the Labor party conference in October.

Steady increase of the highest taxes in the world is now approaching the point of diminishing returns, and it is only a question of time when flight of capital trying to escape taxation will begin the same as in Germany.

As a result, trade and industry are suffering, unemployment is rising to record heights and foreign monies are getting scarce, which is most serious in view of the $900,000,000 of British funds frozen in Germany bills and credits in Germany as well as $350,000,000 of French short term credits in London, all of which menace the gold reserve.

Britain's test will be whether she has learned from the German catastrophe. It was regarded as most encouraging that she is summing up all her moral and financial reserves. Whether the German dam can be repaired is doubtful.

Smith's story "broke" because of hostility between Insull and Rosenwald, but that seems incredible. Important capitalists are usually intelligent enough to love each other or at least act as though they did.

For Mr. Rosenwald, it may be mentioned, without waiting for him to speak, that there is a difference between trying to buy a seat in the senate and trying to persuade one whom you consider an unfit candidate to withdraw from the race.

The Lindberghs on their interesting flight first to Tokyo and then on around the world, are seeking foreign parts with a vengeance.

An early reporter for the Japanese newspaper "Hochi" found them at Petropavlovsk in the central executive headquarters of Russian rule. The walls were decorated with red flags with figures of Lenin and Stalin, the dictator gone and the dictator in power.

Lindbergh's impression of Russia would be interesting but, wise young man, he confines his opinions to his specialty, flying.

go to the country in debate with Senator Dickinson, of Iowa, on the tariff issue, there appears to be no doubt that the administration is anxious, too, to make this an issue next year.

Tariff Is Topic
The Republican national committee publicity bureau has been hammering steadily on the tariff all summer and Senator Dickinson's acceptance of the Harrison challenge for a tariff debate came through the Republican publicity organization.

While Governor Roosevelt is carrying on a two-front battle, within and without the party, the same may be said of the Republican leader, President Hoover. He is not only busily defending his administration and preparing for the future but there is every indication that he also is keeping a close eye on possible trouble within the Republican fold. Republicans close to the administration have been quick of recent days to reply to every attack that carries with it danger of an intra-party uprising against Mr. Hoover's re-nomination.

Every LUCKY STRIKE is made of the finest tobacco leaves the world can offer—the finest from Turkey—the finest from Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Georgia and the Carolinas—the Cream of many crops throughout the world. But all tobacco leaves, regardless of price and kind, as nature produces them, contain harsh irritants. LUCKY STRIKE'S exclusive "TOASTING" Process—a process that purifies, that includes the use of the modern Ultra Violet Ray—expels certain harsh irritants naturally present in every tobacco leaf. We sell these expelled irritants to manufacturers of chemical compounds, who use them as a base in making sheep-dip*, as well as a powerful spraying solution for trees, flowers and shrubs—enough to permit the daily dipping of over 50,000 sheep or the daily spraying of many thousands of trees. Thus, you are sure these irritants, naturally present in all tobacco leaves, are not in your LUCKY STRIKE. "They're out—so they can't be in!" No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.

THE DAY In Sports

KELLEY LEADS BATTERS
MULLINS TOPS TEAMS
YOUTZ TOPS HOMERS

JOE M. KELLEY, Kiwanis club star infielder, continued consistent slugging performance in the Salem softball league during the third quarter, slugging out a total of 27 hits for 19 runs out of 63 times at bat to top the circuit with a .429 average.

Official league batting standings, following games played last week, gave Kelley a slight lead over Frank Scullion while Cecil Scullion, the only hitmen to hold his place in the league "big five" all season, dropped back to fourth. Jimmy Fitzpatrick's .415 gave him third place in the race.

Michael Schuller, a member of the "big five" until ten days ago, dropped still farther in batting standings, and now is in seventh place with .375. Clifford Greenisen, hardware pitcher and third-sacker, has fifth place with an even .400.

The Mullins Foremen's club still holds the lead in team standings and is the only league aggregation batting over the .300-mark. Mullins has 307 with the Hardware's 294 ranking second. The Kiwanis club has 290 for third ranking.

Paul Myers, Mullins first-sacker, is still ahead in run-scoring with 32 followed by his teammate Fitzpatrick who has 31. Fitzpatrick leads in total hits with 37, F. Scullion following with 29.

Foremen's Club Rolls Up Five Runs In Last 2 Innings To Win, 6-2

The Mullins Foremen's club was back in first place in the Salem softball league today following a decisive 6-3 victory registered at the expense of the Ohio Edison Power company combine in a thrilling battle at Centennial park field Monday.

Featured by spectacular fielding of Bob Campbell at third base and home runs by Martin Debnar and Paul Sartick, the game was an interesting affair, attracting more than 1,000 fans to the park. It was probably the largest crowd to ever witness a Salem mushball tilt.

The victory dropped the powermen into third place, one-half game behind the second-place Colonial Billiards with Mullins holding a full-game edge in first place.

Hardware Trounced

The victory of the body-makers over the Ohio Edison was far from the evening's big feature at Centennial field yesterday. The first contest, involving the Salem Hardware and Community Service Station, brought out the big thrill that comes with every dope upset as the Service outfit handed the 1930 champions a 12-9 drubbing in a free-hitting spectacle.

The Community team stepped in front to a five run lead in the first inning but the Hardware came back and, aided by Bing Miller's homer, took an 8-5 lead in the fourth. The last-place team pounced on George Early in the last half of the frame, pounded out five hits and tallied seven runs with the aid of two errors by Sartick.

Andy Hodge's homer with two on the sacks was a big feature. The game was marred by frequent bickering of Hardware players protesting decisions of umpires at every opportunity.

Mullins tallied once in the first but Sartick crashed out the first ball pitched by Sam Watkins for a genuine home run into left field and circled the bases with the tying run.

Neither team registered in the second and third but Mullins came through with three runs in the fourth and two more in the finale. The fourth-inning runs were scored when Debnar clouted a homer with two on.

Ohio Edison rallied in the fifth but the spurs were cut short after two runs crossed the plate. Campbell, Fitzpatrick star, Bob Campbell's spectacular catches of two foul flies and a sensational catch by Fitzpatrick were features.

Reduce Food Prejudices
Returning from his first trip abroad, Dick announced to his wife, "I'm a reformed man. You'll never hear me criticize food again! And I'm ready to eat anything—even milk toast and spinach!"

It appears that Dick, who cherishes his prejudices carefully had made up his mind to avoid all the suspicious, foreign mixtures that were offered him, and to stick as far as possible to dishes that resembled home fare. The result was that he nearly starved the first week he spent in Europe. Meanwhile all sorts of attractive dishes passed under his eye, tempting him, yet repelling him because he didn't know what they might contain! After a week of this he impulsively made a right-about-face. He recklessly ordered, sampling everything. And to his astonishment found that most strange foods were good!

Most food prejudices are a nuisance—both to their possessors and their victims. Yet people often admit them with an air of pride! "I can't eat oysters—or spinach—or any kind of fish—or eggplant—or sweetbreads," they proclaim, as though it were a special accomplishment.

A varied diet is a wholesome thing, and the individual who grows up healthy enough to enjoy everything should not take on a handicap in the shape of food prejudices. There are persons who sneer at cucumbers, squash, and other perfectly good fruits and vegetables. They know not whereof they speak—For all vegetables, properly prepared, can be delectable. And certainly one should give them a trial.

A Social Nuisance
Of course, some persons have authentic constitutional aversions. There may be a legitimate reason, acknowledged by the doctor, for their not being able to drink milk, or eat cucumbers, or the fibrous vegetables. Sometimes that is a curable condition—sometimes not. It's up to the doctor to advise. But those cases are exceptional. When the average person declares a food prejudice it's that and nothing more. And if the prejudices grow, excludes himself from the wholesome values of a long list. Greater, the person with food prejudices is a social nuisance. What hostess hasn't suffered the mild irritation of observing the pre-judiced guest carefully avoiding a dish in which she takes special pride? Some there are who just won't touch asparagus. Or who think mushrooms hazardous. Or suspect all lobster served with a creamy sauce.

One can become self-educated out of prejudice by the simple process of trying in private the unpopular foods. Getting used to them. And eventually liking them!

Persons who want anything know that The News is the Want Medium in this vicinity. So read it.

"NIGHT NURSE"

At The State

A cast of unusual talent is combined in making "Night Nurse", starting a three day run today at the State theater. Barbara Stanwyck is the star ably supported by such stars as Ben Lyon, Joan Blondell, Clark Gable, Charles Winninger, Edward Nugent, Allan Lane, Blanche Friderici, and Vera Lewis.

The piece is based on the sensational novel by Dora Macy. It presents vividly the temptations, fears, loves and deeds of a girl who comes as a probationer to a great city hospital and stays until she becomes not only a nurse—but a woman who saves lives and wins through suffering the one thing women most want in life.

As Lora Hart of "Night Nurse" Miss Stanwyck gives a splendid performance, adding to the success she achieved through her portrayals in "Thief" and the "Miracle Woman."

"TABU"

At The Grand

"Tabu", South Sea Island romance plays today at the Grand theater.

"Tabu" was filmed in Bora Bora, an island in the South Pacific, thousands of miles from civilization. The actors in it are natives.

Reri, a beautiful maiden of the lovely isle of Bora Bora, is in love with Mahiti, a handsome youth of the tribe. Together these two live a life of innocent joy and pleasure, in the enchanted island where work is unknown and each hour is an hour of joyous excitement.

But a day comes when it must all apparently end. Hiti, the high priest and chief of the tribe, visits the island, with the announcement that Reri, because of her beauty and innocence, has been chosen as the sacred virgin—the maiden who is to personify the honor of her race. She must be set aside as a goddess, as one who is "tabu"—and beyond the possession of any man.

Whoever shall display a desire for her must be put to death.

The ending is dramatic, emotional, different.

History on a Bank Check

What history is written on every one of your bank checks! Each contains the name of the bank on which it is drawn, the city and state, date, number, name of person to whom issued; the amount, and your signature; also sometimes, the item for which the money was paid.

No wonder checks, when indorsed by the recipient, become legal receipts for the sum paid.
